Swedish musician wants ...

PERMISSION TO 'WINE'

A SWEDISH musician has written Crazy for permission to record "Nani Wine" in his native language.

Lars Hansson, who was holidaying in Trinidad during Carnival, was so fascinated with Crazy's composition, that he felt it should have won the Road March.

Hansson says he likes the song, and would like to record it in Swedish.

The musician confessed it wasn't possible to translate direct to Swedish, and so he has done a free translation.

"My hope," he wrote Crazy, "is to create an interest in soca music in Sweden."

Hansson stated he would be in Trinidad soon, and will probably have a demo of "Farmor Svang" ("Nani Wine") by then.
