SWEDEN is crazy about calypsonian Crazy.

Edwin Ayoung did a fast four-day stint in Sweden and left the Europeans screaming and begging for more.

He performed in four cities - Karlstad, Norrköping, Stockholm and Gothenburg from September 16 to 19.

And the "Loveable Lunatic" charmed them to death.

Crazy made front page headlines in one of the largest selling newspapers "Gothenburg Post".

He was also featured in the "Varmlands Folkblad", the "NYA Wermlands Tidningen" and "Arbetet" newspapers.

Crazy's tour of Sweden was organised by a Swedish soca band called "Soca Rebels".

Two Trinidadians, Trevor Phillips and Rudolph Roberts, teamed up with Guyanese Michael Ferreira, and seven Swedes to form "Soca Rebels".

Two members of the band, Lars and Mats Hansson, made a Swedish version of Crazy's "Nani Wine" called "Farmor Svang".

CRAZY ... a massive attraction in Europe

That version was on the TnT airwaves last year.

According to Lars Hansson, all Crazy's shows were smash hits.

"The one in Gothenburg was totally sold out and scores of people were outside Club Magasinet, still hoping to get in for the show," he said.

"The large crowd in the club just loved Crazy and danced until morning light.

"After the shows, people were asking about how to get his music on records and when he is coming back to Sweden."
